Margaret Ginnitti Nursing Coordinator Windsor's Caring Connection Adult Day Health Center

"I always wanted to be a nurse when I was growing up and I have never worked any job other than nursing," Margaret Ginnitti proudly says.

Margaret is one of three nurses at Windsor's Caring Connection Adult Day Health Center. For more than 20 years she has dispensed medicine, developed care plans, communicated with clients' doctors, family and case managers and monitored clients' overall health and well being.

An avid reader, Margaret also enjoys the beach and escaping with her husband to their campsite in Salem, CT that they have enjoyed for 21 years. Her husband also tolerates her obsession with Patrick Swayze and her habitual viewing of the movie Dirty Dancing. (Margaret admits to seeing it more than 100 times.)

Far more than 100 – more like thousands of Caring

Connection clients have been cared for by Margaret and very strong bonds have been made with their families along the way.

One would think it is sad when a client leaves the Caring Connection, but Margaret has a much brighter outlook. "I know how much better we made their lives while they were with us," she says. "Making their lives better is what really counts."

The Caring Connection Adult Day Health Center is a not-for-profit and self-sustaining Town of Windsor enterprise fund that provides quality day health services for any age adult facing physical and mental challenges. To learn more, call 860.547.0251.
