

As seen in the 2014 Fall edition of There's a lot to do in Windsor

Running the Streets

Officer Dwayne Taylor – Windsor Safety Services

Someday Windsor Police Officer Dwayne Taylor would like to run a marathon. "It's on my bucket list," he says.

Should not be a problem. Dwayne is one of the busiest people around. A 20 year veteran of the Windsor Police Department, you have probably seen him around Windsor Center where he has been working the day shift the past eight to nine years. When not on duty, he can be found running the streets with the determination and perseverance of a man with a goal.

An avid runner, Dwayne recently completed his first half-marathon in Atlanta, Georgia and a duathlon last spring, an impressive feat.

His 30-plus year tenure as a DJ is equally impressive. His weekends are filled with weddings, sweet 16 parties or anniversary parties and other special events. His love of sports makes announcing football, basketball, soccer games and races an enjoyable part-time gig.

Dwayne has boundless energy, an infectious smile, and a work ethic he learned from the person he looks up to the most, his mother, who raised him and his brother and two sisters working the graveyard shift for the US Postal Service.

Like many young boys, Dwayne dreamed of being a professional football player when he was young. That may not have panned out, but we sure are happy to have him running our streets in Windsor, both on duty and off, to keep us all safe.